18. Patrick Hudson, MD Presentation on Coaching Services.

Dr. Hudson presented to the Board his coaching services for physicians, he provides services for physicians only. All coaching is one-on-one, physician to physician. Coaching usually begins with an intervention lasting several hours and is tailored to the needs of the individual institution or physician. Dr. Hudson feels very strongly that his initial contact with physicians need to involve the development of trust, so that the physician knows that coaching will benefit him or her, as well as an organization.

The recommended approach includes one or two days of intense coaching, maximum of 5 hours coaching per day. During this time, Dr. Hudson will get to know the physician and lay out the program for the next few weeks. After the initial intervention it is recommended that the average physician 10-12 weekly live or telephone sessions each lasting about 50 minutes. All clients need a DiSC evaluation (which is an assessment to determine personality style) prior to the coaching and as needed other evaluations might be needed, including EQ (emotional intelligence assessment) and/or 360s (assessment helps identify strengths and developmental needs).

In closing Dr. Hudson stated that it is very unlikely a lifetime pattern of poor communication, anger or poor emotional intelligence will change quickly. After the conclusion of the sessions monthly telephone follow-up sessions for one year are recommended.
